Certified Nurse Aide Medical Information Waiver

Medical Restrictions:

I acknowledge the physical requirements are as follows: must be able to squat, bend and lift, or assist with 100 pounds. The student is aware that if they have a medical condition, develop a medical condition, are pregnant, become pregnant, are under medical care, or have any physically limiting condition, a medical release must be provided by the student's medical care provider. The medical release must indicate that you are cleared to squat, bend and lift, or assist with 100 pounds during your training and testing. Because the skills you may need to perform for the CNA certification exam are not known until testing day, medical restrictions may prevent you from completing the nurse aide certification skill test. See the Texas Nurse Aide Candidate Handbook for the skill requirements.

- Students who do not meet the stated physical requirements will not be able to attend clinical rotations. Clinical rotations are required to successfully complete the CNA course

*I acknowledge and understand the above information. If I am unable to produce a release from physician on first day of class, I will not be allowed to participate in skill practice or clinical. This will result in Non-Mastery of the class and students DO NOT receive a refund after the start of the class.
